

Andy Fittes

I have been a serving member of the Metropolitan Police for 25 years and currently, I am an Operational Planning Sergeant in the east end of London. Amongst other things, I am responsible for delivering the policing on one of the 'Live Site' entertainment zones for the 2012 Olympic Games.

I am also the Chairman of the Sergeants Federation for the Met; a role I took up this year having been a Federation Rep for the last ten years. In addition to this, I'm also an active member of the International Police Association and help to organise the 'Tower of London Police nights'.

I'm 42 years old and have two daughters aged 9 and 11. They are both members of No1 CopperPot, as am I, and I think it is important they are encouraged to take an interest in money matters aside from spending mine!

I have always been impressed with No1 CopperPot as an organisation and am keen to become more active in supporting it. It is for this reason I am standing for one of the directors posts this year.
